Dry Needling Consent Form

Patient Name: _____ DOB: _____

Your Physical Therapist has recommended that dry needling be utilized in your treatment plan. Dry needling is a very effective treatment technique utilized in conjunction with other physical therapy interventions to inactivate myofascial trigger points and the pain and dysfunction they cause. It involves the use of a very fine (usually 0.3 mm/30 gauge), solid filament, sterile needle (also used for acupuncture) which is inserted into the skin and directly into a myofascial trigger point. Repeated strokes or movements of the needle without completely withdrawing it help to inactivate the trigger point, all of which may take approximately 30-60 seconds at each site. There may be more than one trigger point in a muscle requiring needling, and more than one muscle with trigger points. There is no medication used in this technique.

Dry needling is a technique used in physical therapy practice to treat trigger point in muscles. Dry needling should not be confused with a complete acupuncture treatment performed by a licensed acupuncturist. A complete acupuncture treatment might yield a holistic benefit not available through a limited dry needling treatment.

Benefits of dry needling include pain control/reduction, improvement in range of motion and mobility, improvement in muscle strength and function, and improvement in overall functional ability of the involved areas being treated.

Potential risks and steps to minimize these include:

- Temporarily increased pain, soreness, or aching in area(s) treated for one to three days following treatment - This may be minimized by other treatment interventions used in physical therapy such as modalities (ice, heat, ultrasound, etc.), stretching, and rest from excessive use of the area.
- Infection - Anytime the skin is penetrated, there is a risk of infection. This risk is minimized with the use of sterile needles, which are disposed of after treatment and never used between patients.
- Bruising/bleeding - *A needle may penetrate an artery or vein, which may cause a small amount of immediate bleeding and possible bruising later. Your physical therapist will do their best to avoid penetrating an artery or vein, and utilize pressure to the site should this occur. The use of some medications that interfere with blood clotting may make this more likely to occur, and you are encouraged to inform your physical therapist of any anticoagulant medication you may be taking.
- Penetration of a nerve - Your physical therapist will do their best to avoid contacting or penetrating any nerves by thoroughly palpating anatomical locations and avoiding common neural pathways. In the event that a nerve is stimulated, temporary paresthesia (a prickling or tingling sensation) may result. This is usually brief and sometimes only present at the moment the nerve is stimulated. If sufficiently irritated, this sensation may last for a few days, but should fully resolve.
- Pneumothorax (penetration of the chest cavity) - Even a very small hole in the chest cavity can cause air to accumulate in the space around the lung. This buildup of air puts pressure on the lung, so it cannot expand as much as it normally does when taking a breath. Symptoms may include difficulty breathing or shortness of breath, tightness in the chest, fatigue, and increased heart rate. If you experience any of these symptoms at any time after a dry needling session, proceed to an emergency facility and inform them you have been treated with dry needling. Using extra care and safety precautions when needling muscles near the lungs minimizes the chances of this complication.

Please be sure to inform your Physical Therapist prior to treatment if you are pregnant, taking any medication that will thin blood, using long-term steroids or immunosuppressant medications, or have an implanted medical device.

I have reviewed the above information and understand the risks and benefits associated with dry needling. It is my desire to pursue treatment, including dry needling, and I give my consent. This consent is valid for 1 year unless revoked in writing.
